Acknowledgement

The accomplishment of the present dissertation was an impossible undertaking without the contributions and supports of many good people. First of all, I would like to express my sincerest thanks to my respected supervisor, Dr. Moinzadeh for his helpful advice, encouragement and constant support. In fact, his meticulous reading and corrections of my dissertation were invaluable to me. I would also like to extend my appreciations to my kind and supportive advisor, Dr. Ketabi for his generous support, suggestions and guidance in helping me finish this project.

I also cordially thank Dr. Tavakoli as the admirable head of English Department of Faculty of Foreign Languages, University of Isfahan for his illuminating comments that considerably improved the proposal and finally the project.

My deepest gratitude also goes to kind and knowledgeable professors of English Department at University of Isfahan, Dr. Youhannaee, Dr. Eslami, and Dr. Barati that I had the opportunity of being their student. I feel incredibly fortunate to do my PhD study among so many great professors at the University of Isfahan.

My special gratitude also goes to Professor Barrie Bennet my advisor in the Curriculum, Teaching, and Learning Department from Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (OISE) at the University of Toronto who helped me a lot during the time that I was in Sabbatical in the mentioned Institute. I also thank Dr. Sarfaroz Niozof, Professor Olesya Falenchuk, and Janice Abduljabar from OISE, University of Toronto for their generous help and guidance and answering my questions regarding the study.

Last but not least, I am indebted to my wife whose constant support encouraged me to do my best in the course of the project. Thanks also to my parents who devoted all their lives to my education. I would also like to thank Zeinab Moradi and Shakiba Razmeh for their support in preparing the ground for my defense.

Needless to say, I accept the sole responsibility for any possible flaws in the present study.

Abstract

The aim of the present study was to analyze three course book series: Iranian high schools ELT course books, Interchange Third Edition, and American English File. These course books are commonly used in public and private schools in the Iranian context. The analysis of the above course books was done in light of the Theory of Multiple Intelligences (MI) proposed by Howard Gardner (1983). The conversations, grammar and reading comprehension activities of the above course books were analyzed based on MI checklist prepared and used by Christison et al. (1996) to examine where they included multiple intelligences. The intelligence profile of individual activities, course books and finally each series of the course books were specified and presented. The most common types of intelligences engaged in students by Iranian high school ELT course books were observed to be verbal/linguistic, logical/mathematical, and intrapersonal. The intelligence profile for Interchange Third edition was seen to be verbal/linguistic, logical/mathematical, spatial/ visual, interpersonal, and intrapersonal which means engaging five types of intelligences. The most frequently engaged types of intelligences in American English File were observed to be verbal/linguistic, logical/mathematical, spatial/visual, interpersonal, and intrapersonal the same as Interchange course books engaging five types of intelligence. The frequency of distribution for multiple intelligences among the three series were compared using Chi-Square test and the results indicated a significant difference of distribution among the three mentioned course books. The Logical distribution of each type of intelligence in each series of course books from one level to another and later among the three course books were also analyzed. The results indicated an almost logical distribution for most types of intelligences in the two course books of Interchange and American English File but not in Iranian high school ELT course books. The results of the study can be applied in the instruction of the mentioned course books to engage MI.
