

Shiraz University

Faculty of Literature and Humanities

M.A. Thesis in Teaching English as a Foreign Language-TEFL

Disciplinary Acculturation: A Comparative Study of English and Persian Introductory Textbooks of Sociology and Linguistics

By

Sara Shahab

Supervised by

Dr. N. Rashidi

September 2013

دانشکده ادبیات و علوم انسانی

پایان نامه کارشناسی ارشد در رشته زبان انگلیسی-آموزش

فرهنگ پذیری رشته ای: مقایسه کتب درسی مقدماتی رشته های جامعه
شناسی و زبان شناسی در زبان انگلیسی و فارسی

به کوشش

ساراشهاب

استاد راهنما

دکتر ناصر رشیدی

شهریور ماه ۹۲

Declaration

I Sara Shahab an M.A. student of English language teaching at the faculty of Literature and Humanities, hereby declare that this thesis is the result of my own research, and I have provided exact references wherever I have quoted someone. I also declare that the topic of my research is an original one and has not been worked upon before. I hereby promise not to publish the findings of this research and not to make it accessible to others without the permission of Shiraz University holds the copyright on this research.

Name: Sara Shahab

Date: 1392/06/22

IN THE NAME OF GOD

DISCIPLINARY ACCULTURATION: A COMPARATIVE STUDY OF ENGLISH AND PERSIAN
INTRODUCTORY TEXTBOOKS OF SOCIOLOGY AND LINGUISTICS

BY

SARA SHAHAB

THESIS

SUBMITTED TO THE SCHOOL OF GRADUATE STUDIES IN PARTIAL FULFILLMENT OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEGREE OF MASTER OF ARTS (M.A.)

IN

ENGLISH LANGUAGE TEACHING
SHIRAZ UNIVERSITY
SHIRAZ
ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF IRAN

EVALUATED AND APPROVED BY THE THESIS COMMITTEE AS: EXCELLENT

N. Rashidi..... N. RASHIDI, Ph.D., ASSOCIATE PROF. OF TEFL
(CHAIR)

M. Saadat..... M. SAADAT, Ph.D., ASSISTANT PROF. OF TEFL
(ADVISOR)

Shir..... GH. SHAHINI, Ph.D., ASSISTANT PROF OF TEFL
(INTERNAL EXAMINER)

SEPTEMBER 2013

Acknowledgments

This thesis would not have come to a successful completion, without the support of many people, to only some of whom it is possible to give particular mention here. First and foremost, I would like to express my extreme gratitude to Dr. Rashidi, for being an outstanding supervisor and excellent professor, whose constant encouragement, support, and invaluable suggestions made this work successful. His enthusiasm and tremendous expertise for my topic is extremely appreciated. He has been everything that one could want in a supervisor. I am also deeply indebted to my advisor, Dr. Saadat, for her time and effort in reviewing this work and providing valuable feedback and guidance throughout my research. I am really grateful for her invaluable advice, comments and support. My sincere thanks goes to Dr. Shahini for his invaluable collaboration with me.

Last but not least, I would like to thank my parents and my only brother for the support they provided me through my entire life and particularly, I must acknowledge my father, without whose unequivocal support, love, and encouragement, I would not have finished this thesis. I would also like to thank my mother for her affections and devotion. I am also most grateful to my husband, without whose love, encouragement, personal support, and editing assistance, I would not have completed this thesis.

Abstract

Disciplinary acculturation: A comparative study of English and Persian introductory textbooks of sociology and Linguistics

By

Sara Shahab

The present study aimed at investigating the specific discourse cycles and schematic (lexico-grammatical) structures, particularly the choice of grammatical subject, grammatical metaphor (nominalization), and thematization of some introductory textbooks across disciplines and Languages to see to what extent they acculturate students into the new subjects. To this end, two well-established English and Persian introductory textbooks in the discipline of sociology, and two other well-established English and Persian introductory textbooks in the discipline of Linguistics were examined. The study was conducted with reference to Love (1991, 1993) and Love's (as cited in Hewings, 2006) suggested framework for the analysis of introductory textbooks. More specifically, the study used MacDonald's (1994) classification of the head-word of grammatical subjects, and the theoretical framework of Hallidaean's Systemic Functional Linguistics (SFL) to investigate the choice of nominalization, as well as thematization. The researcher, first, analyzed the corpus in terms of lexico-grammatical features. Then, overall chapter structures, and intra-discourse cycles within chapters were examined. Finally, the introductory textbooks from the two disciplines were compared and contrasted in order to determine their similarities and differences in establishing a model of the epistemology of discipline for approaching the text, and hence acculturating students into the discipline. The results indicated that epistemic subjects were more frequent in English introductory textbooks, while phenomenal subjects were more frequently employed in Persian ones. Nominalization was frequently employed in all introductory textbooks analyzed. In addition, whereas marked sentences were abundant in English introductory textbooks, unmarked ones were more frequently employed in Persian introductory textbooks. Furthermore, the results showed that though in English introductory textbooks, the chapters either started with theory, data, or culminated in cutting-edge real time, problematization, in Persian ones, the chapters less frequently culminated in problematization of the interpretive process. The results, moreover, revealed that lexico-grammatical features reflected and reinforced the choice of intra-discourse cycles, which in turn, underpinned the structure of the chapters. In other words, there appeared to be a reciprocal relation between the structure of the chapters, intra-discourse-cycles, and lexico-grammatical features, which together, constructed the epistemology of the disciplines. Regarding pedagogical implications, the study suggested that this kind of analysis enhances both teachers' and students' knowledge concerning the process of acculturation into the epistemological issues of a discipline.

Key words: Lexico-grammatical features, acculturation, epistemology, discipline, introductory textbooks, intra-discourse-cycles, chapter structures.

Table of Contents

Contents	page
CHAPTER ONE: Introduction
1.0 Introduction	1
1.1 Preliminaries	1
1.2 Definitions of key terms and concepts	1
1.2.1 Genre	2
1.2.2 Genre theories	3
1.2.2.1 New Rhetoric	4
1.2.2.2 Systemic functional Linguistics	4
1.2.2.3 English for specific purposes (ESP)	5
1.2.3 Acculturation	6
1.2.4 Lexico-grammatical features	7
1.2.4.1 Grammatical Subject	8
1.2.4.2 Grammatical metaphor (nominalization)	10
1.2.4.3 Theme	10
1.2.4.4 Discourse cycles	11
1.3 Objective of the study	12
1.4 Research questions	13
1.5 Significance of the study	13
CHAPTER TWO: Literature Review
2.0 Introduction	15
2.1 Three major traditions of genre theories	15
2.1.1 Systemic functional Linguistics (SFL)	15
2.1.2 New Rhetoric	16
2.1.3 English for specific purposes (ESP)	17
2.2 Genre studies	18

2.2.1 Disciplinary studies	19
2.2.2 Inter-disciplinary studies	21
2.3 Academic acculturation studies	23
2.4 Studies on lexico-grammatical features	25
2.4.1 Studies on types of grammatical subject	25
2.4.2 Grammatical metaphor (nominalization) studies	26
2.4.3 Theme studies	27

CHPATER THREE: Methodology

3.0 Introduction	29
3.1 Materials	29
3.2 Design	30
3.3 Data Collection	30
3.4 Data Analysis	33
3.4.1 Summary of steps in analysis	35

CHAPTER FOUR: Results and Discussion

4.0 Introduction	37
4.1 Results	37
4.1.1 Lexico-grammatical features	37
4.1.1.1 Lexico-grammatical features of Yule's Linguistics	37
4.1.1.1.1 Chapter 2	38
4.1.1.1.1.1 Animals and human Language	38
4.1.1.1.1.2 Communicative and informative signals	40
4.1.1.1.1.3 Displacement	41
4.1.1.1.1.4 Talking to animals	43
4.1.1.1.2 Chapter 10	45
4.1.1.1.2.1 Conceptual and associative meaning	45
4.1.1.1.2.2 Antonymy	47

4.1.1.1.2.3 Prototypes	48
4.1.1.1.2.4 Metonymy	50
4.1.1.1.3 Chapter 19	52
4.1.1.1.3.1 Social Dialects	52
4.1.1.1.3.2 Speech style and style shifting	54
4.1.1.1.3.3 Register and jargon	56
4.1.1.1.3.4 The grammar of a vernacular	57
4.1.1.2 Lexico-grammatical features of Bagheri's Elements of Linguistics (مقدمات زبانشناسی)	59
4.1.1.2.1 Chapter 1	59
4.1.1.2.1.1 زبانشناسی چیست؟	60
4.1.1.2.1.2 علت دگرگونی و تحول در زبان	63
4.1.1.2.1.3 تاریخچه مطالعات زبانی	64
4.1.1.2.1.4 زبان و گفتار	66
4.1.1.2.2 Chapter 5 اندام های گویایی و اصوات زبانی	67
4.1.1.2.2.1 اندامهای گویایی	68
4.1.1.2.2.2 هجا	70
4.1.1.2.2.3 فرآیندهای واجی	72
4.1.1.2.2.4 صدا و آوا	74
4.1.1.2.3 Chapter 7	76
4.1.1.2.3.1 دستور چیست؟	76
4.1.1.2.3.2 صرف	77
4.1.1.2.3.3 نحو	79
4.1.1.3 Lexico-grammatical features of Azad Armaki's Sociological theories	81
4.1.1.3.1 Chapter 3	81
4.1.1.3.1.1 نظریه کارکرد گرایی ساختی	82
4.1.1.3.1.2 ویژگی های بینش نظریه پارسنز	86
4.1.1.3.1.3 عناصر نظریه پارسنز	87
4.1.1.3.1.4 ضعف های کارکرد گرایی ساختی	89
4.1.1.3.2 Chapter 9	90
4.1.1.3.2.1 تاثیر از زبانشناسی دوسوسور	90
4.1.1.3.2.2 نظریه ساختی لویی اشتراوس	91

4.1.1.3.2.3 اصول روش ساختی	93
4.1.1.3.2.4 دیدگاه ساختی ژان پیاژه	94
4.1.1.3.3 Chapter 14	96
4.1.1.3.3.1 دیدگاه جامعه شناسی جرج هومنز	96
4.1.1.3.3.2 انتقاد وارده بر دیدگاه هومنز	97
4.1.1.3.3.3 پیتربلو	98
4.1.1.3.3.4 ریچارد امرسون	99
4.1.1.4 Lexico-grammatical features of Giddens' Sociology	100
4.1.1.4.1 Chapter 2	101
4.1.1.4.1.1 Influences on the social change	101
4.1.1.4.1.2 Globalization	104
4.1.1.4.1.3 The globalization debate	106
4.1.1.4.1.4. The need for global governance	108
4.1.1.4.2 Chapter 6	109
4.1.1.4.2.1 Theories of child development	109
4.1.1.4.2.2 The difficulty of non-sexist child rearing	111
4.1.1.4.2.3 Gender learning	112
4.1.1.4.2.4 Ageism	113
4.1.1.4.3 Chapter 18	114
4.1.1.4.3.1 Tylorism and Fordism	115
4.1.1.4.3.2 Women and work	117
4.1.1.4.3.3 Job insecurity, unemployment and the social significance of work	118
4.1.1.4.3.4. Unemployment	120
4.1.3 Overall Chapter Structures	120
4.1.3.1 Yule's Linguistics	120
4.1.3.2 Bagheri's Elements of Linguistics	121
4.1.3.3 Azad Armaki's Sociological theories	121
4.1.3.4 Giddens' Sociology	121
4.1.4 Intra-discourse cycles	122
4.1.4.1 Yule's Linguistics	122
4.1.4.1.1 Chapter 2	122

4.1.4.1.1.1 Animals and human Language	122
4.1.4.1.1.2 Communicative and informative signals	123
4.1.4.1.1.3 Displacement	123
4.1.4.1.1.4 Talking to animals	124
4.1.4.1.2 Chapter 10	125
4.1.4.1.2.1 Conceptual and associative meaning	125
4.1.4.1.2.2 Antonymy	125
4.1.4.1.2.3 Prototypes	126
4.1.4.1.2.4 Metonymy	127
4.1.4.1.3 Chapter 19	127
4.1.4.1.3.1 Social Dialects	128
4.1.4.1.3.2 Speech style and style shifting	128
4.1.4.1.3.3 Register and jargon	129
4.1.4.1.3.4 The grammar of a vernacular	129
4.1.4.2 Bagheri's Elements of Linguistics	130
4.1.4.2.1 Chapter 1	130
4.1.4.2.1.1 زبانشناسی چیست؟	131
4.1.4.2.1.2 علت دگرگونی و تحول در زبان	132
4.1.4.2.1.3 تاریخچه مطالعات زبانی	133
4.1.4.2.1.4 زبان و گفتار	134
4.1.4.2.2 Chapter 5	135
4.1.4.2.2.1 اندامهای گویایی	135
4.1.4.2.2.2 هجا	137
4.1.4.2.2.3 فرآیندهای واجی	138
4.1.4.2.2.4 صدا و آوا	139
4.1.4.2.3 Chapter 7	140
4.1.4.2.3.1 دستور چیست؟	140
4.1.4.2.3.2 صرف	141
4.1.4.2.3.3 نحو	142
4.1.4.3 Azad Armaki's Sociological theories	143
4.1.4.3.1 Chapter 3	143

4.1.4.3.1.1 نظریه کارکرد گرایی ساختی	144
4.1.4.3.1.2 ویژگی های بینش نظریه پارسنز	145
4.1.4.3.1.3 عناصر نظریه پارسنز	146
4.1.4.3.1.4 ضعف های کارکرد گرایی ساختی	147
4.1.4.3.2 Chapter 9	147
4.1.4.3.2.1 تاثیر از زبانشناسی دوسوسور	147
4.1.4.3.2.2 نظریه ساختی لویی اشتراوس	148
4.1.4.3.2.3 اصول روش ساختی	148
4.1.4.3.2.3 دیدگاه ساختی ژان پیاژه	149
4.1.4.3.3 Chapter 14	149
4.1.4.3.3.1 دیدگاه جامعه شناسی جرج هومنز	149
4.1.4.3.3.2 انتقاد وارده بر دیدگاه هومنز	150
4.1.4.3.3.3 پیتر بلو	150
4.1.4.3.3.4 ریچارد امرسون	151
4.1.4.4 Giddens' Sociology	151
4.1.4.4.1 Chapter 2	151
4.1.4.4.1.1 Influences on the social change	151
4.1.4.4.1.2 Globalization	152
4.1.4.4.1.3 The globalization debate	153
4.1.4.4.1.4 The need for global governance	154
4.1.4.4.2 Chapter 6	154
4.1.4.4.2.1 Theories of child development	154
4.1.4.4.2.2 The difficulty of non-sexist child rearing	155
4.1.4.4.2.3 Gender learning	155
4.1.4.4.2.4 Ageism	156
4.1.4.4.3 Chapter 18	157
4.1.4.4.3.1 Tylorism and Fordism	157
4.1.4.4.3.2 Women and work	158
4.1.4.4.3.3 Job insecurity, unemployment and the social significance of work	158
4.1.4.4.3.4 Unemployment	159
4.1.5 Comparison of the textbooks analyzed	159

4.1.5.1 Linguistics introductory textbooks	159
4.1.5.2 Sociology introductory textbooks	160
4.1.5.3 Linguistics and Sociology introductory textbooks	161
4.1.6 Discussion of the results	162
4.1.6.1 Lexico-grammatical features	162
4.1.6.1.1 Grammatical Subject	162
4.1.6.1.1.1 Yule's Linguistics	162
4.1.6.1.1.2 Bagheri's Elements of Linguistics	163
4.1.6.1.1.3 Azad Armaki's Sociological theories	163
4.1.6.1.1.4 Giddens' Sociology	164
4.1.6.1.2 Grammatical metaphor (nominalization)	165
4.1.6.1.3 Thematization	165
4.1.6.1.3.1 Yule's Linguistics	165
4.1.6.1.3.2 Bagheri's Elements of Linguistics	166
4.1.6.1.3.3 Azad Armaki's Sociological theories	166
4.1.6.1.3.4 Giddens' Sociology	166
4.1.6.2 Overall chapter structures	167
4.1.6.2.1 Yule's Linguistics	167
4.1.6.2.2 Bagheri's Elements of Linguistics	167
4.1.6.2.3 Azad Armaki's Sociological theories	167
4.1.6.2.4 Giddens' Sociology	168
4.1.6.3 Intra-discourse cycles	168
4.1.6.3.1 Yule's Linguistics	168
4.1.6.3.2 Bagheri's Elements of Linguistics	168
4.1.6.3.3 Azad Armaki's Sociological theories	169
4.1.6.3.4 Giddens' Sociology	169
4.1.6.4 Comparison of textbooks analyzed	169
4.1.6.4.1 Linguistics introductory textbooks	169
4.1.6.4.2 Sociology introductory textbooks	171
4.1.6.4.3 Linguistics and Sociology introductory textbooks	172

CHAPTER FIVE: Conclusion

5.0 Introduction	175
5.1 A brief summary of the study	175
5.2 Conclusions	176
5.3 Implications	182
5.4 Suggestions for further research	183
References	184

CHAPTER ONE

Introduction

1.0 Introduction

This chapter, first, provides a theoretical background regarding the topic of the study. Then, definitions of the key terms used in the study are provided. Next, the chapter reviews different traditions of genre theories: systemic functional Linguistics (SFL), new rhetoric, and English for Specific Purposes (ESP) perspectives on genre. Then, a brief overview of genre studies is offered which mainly covers disciplinary and interdisciplinary studies. After that, a brief account of academic acculturation and lexico-grammatical studies is provided. Finally, the objective, research questions and significance of the study are mentioned.

1.1 Preliminaries

Recently, researchers have shown an increased interest in academic written genre analysis so that it has become a major concern of language teaching research. According to Swales (1990) genre analysis can be defined as the study of how language is used within a particular setting. Genre analysis makes several noteworthy contributions to our existing literature. First, it is concerned with examining the structural organization of texts by taking in terms of moves and strategies and the way these moves are organized to achieve the communicative purpose of the text. Secondly, genre analysis investigates the specific lexico-grammatical features of the genres to see how they realize the communicative purpose of a text. Textualization, the roles of the writer and the audience, as well as the context are other considerations in genre analysis.

1.2 Definitions of key terms and concepts

1.2.1 Genre

Hyland (2002) stated that,

Genres are abstract, socially recognized ways of using language. It is based on the idea that members of a community usually have little difficulty in recognising similarities in the texts they use frequently and are able to draw on their repeated experiences with such texts to read, understand, and perhaps write them relatively easily. This is, in part, because writing is a practice based on expectations: the reader's chances of interpreting the writer's purpose are increased if the writer takes the trouble to anticipate what the reader might be expecting based on previous texts they have read of the same kind (p.149).

Kress (1989) holds that genres are made as a result of the actions of individual social agents acting not only within the bounds of social history, but also within social contexts and with a knowledge of the way the texts were produced.

Hyland (2002) believes that the notion of genre and its application in language teaching and learning has received more attention in the last decade. Swales (1990) defines genres as classes of texts (communicative events) and their representations in an abstract, socially recognized model of language use. Genres are defined by social or communicative purposes which are readily recognized by the discourse communities which define these purposes as social standards of communication. Richards, Platt and Platt (1992) suggested that genre is a particular class of communicative events the speech community consider to be of the same type.

The way texts relating to different genres accomplish their communicative purposes are conventionalized within the discourse communities. Therefore, specific features of texts can be associated with the specific social contexts which create them. Given that these features are text-specific, we can identify similar texts related to each other. Consequently, what follows is that genres are social practices in contexts including the individual social agents acting within the constraints of those contexts.

Besides, the research literature abounds with studies concerning academic written genre analysis (e.g., Bhatia, 1993; Dudley-Evans, 1998; Hyland, 2000; Swales, 1990, 2004). In recent years, studies of genre analysis have been either disciplinary or inter-disciplinary oriented. According to Hyland (2006), genre-based research has been 'slow to inform research into disciplinary variation'. Only a limited number of recent studies in academic writing have revealed disciplinary and cross-cultural variations in genres, involving Language Teaching and Applied Linguistics (Basturkmen, 2011, Hyland, 2000, 2001, 2002; Lim, 2010; Oztürk, 2007; Samraj, 2000, 2002; Thompson, 2001; Yang & Allison, 2003), Art History (Tucker, 2003), Education (Lim, 2010), Geology (Dressen, 2003), Management (Lim, 2006), Medicine (Li & Ge, 2009; Nwogu, 1997), Biomedicine (Dubois, 1997) and Social Sciences (Brett, 1994; Holmes, 1997; Lewin, Fine, & Young, 2001), Dentistry (Basturkmen, 2012).

Furthermore, so far, the major focus of research in academic genre analysis has been the investigation of the discussion section of research papers, Ph.D. dissertations, and master's thesis within disciplines (Basturkmen, 2012; Bunton, 1999; Hyland, 1996a, 1996b, 2002d, 2007; Samraj, 2004, 2008). Nonetheless, genre studies of textbooks have been limited to introductory texts in undergraduate fields such as physics (Kuhn, 1970), genetics (Myers, 1992), geology (Love 1991, 1993) and economics (Hender-son & Hewings, 1990; McCloskey, 1985; Tadros, 1985). It appears that very few disciplinary studies have been conducted to analyze the genre of introductory textbooks (Love 1991; Myers 1992; Hyland 1999; Love 2002; Woodward-Kron 2002a).

Moreover, a large and growing body of literature has investigated interdisciplinary variation in research articles, master's theses and dissertations: psychology, history, and literature (MacDonald, 1992), history, political science and sociology (Holmes, 1997), biology, philosophy and Linguistics (Samraj, 2008). Nevertheless, as for the interdisciplinary studies on introductory textbooks, few studies have been conducted. Hyland (1999) analyzed introductory textbooks across three disciplines of microbiology, marketing and applied Linguistics and compared them with a similar corpus of research articles. The study focused primarily on the analysis of metadiscourse markers, with little attention paid to the schematic and discourse structures.

1.2.2 Genre theories

According to Hyland (2002), though broadly speaking, researchers identify genres by taking both the context and the readers into account, one can identify three schools of genre theory: The new rhetoric approach, Systemic functional Linguistics (SFL), and English for specific purposes (ESP approach).

1.2.2.1 New Rhetoric

Rhetoric refers to the study of effective speaking and writing as well as the art of persuasion and effective communication. In fact, it investigates how language is used to organize and maintain social groups, construct meanings and identities, coordinate behavior, mediate power, produce change, and create knowledge.

Taking a prescriptive approach, the old rhetorics treated genre as a historical phenomenon rather than as a living force, despite its continuing cultural role in politics, literature, and education. Therefore, in this era there was anxiety considering the fact that rhetoric had not progressed significantly beyond what the ancients had expressed.

So, taking a descriptive approach, the new rhetorics defined genre influenced by the works of rhetorical scholars such as Campbell and Jamieson (1978), and particularly Miller (1984). Miller (1984) states that certain social and historical aspects of rhetoric can be clarified by the analysis of actual genres and thereby reinforces the work of Jamieson. In this tradition, most of the rhetorical scholars treat genre as an unstable entity which cannot be classified. They all aim to illuminate rather than classify genres. Miller (1984) suggests that the number of genres in any society is indeterminate and depends upon the complexity of that society.

1.2.2.2 Systemic functional Linguistics (SFL)

First, in Linguistics, genres have been discussed from the systemic or Hallidaean point of view. In systemic functional Linguistics, Language is considered to be meaning potential, so that language users not only make choices, but also turn out functional texts in terms of different contexts. Coffins (2001) mentioned that systemic functional Linguistics takes social and cultural roles of Language into account. As stated by Martin (2001), systemic functional Linguistics specifically focuses on the sets of choices that Language provides for the speakers to convey meanings.

Linguists consider genres as goal-oriented communicative social events. Martin and Rothery (1986) define genres as staged purposeful processes through which a culture is realized in a language. What's more, linguists define genres as having schematic structures. Rothery (1996) states that genres can be studied in terms of distinctive stages or moves together with the patterns of lexical, grammatical, and cohesive devices which construct the function of these stages of genres.

Additionally, linguists define genres as distinct from registers or styles. Of course, only recently genres have been recognized as distinct from registers. Gregory and Carroll (1978) define registers as functional language variations or contextual language categories correlating groups of linguistic features with recurrent situational features.

Registers have been typically analyzed in terms of three variables: field, tenor, and mode, which relate to the type of activity in which discourse operates its ideas, the status and role of participants and channel of communication, respectively. Martin (1985) makes a three-way distinction between genre, register and language. He believes that genres are realized through registers, and registers in turn are realized through language.

Figure 1. Relationship of genre and register (Eggins & Martin, 1997, p. 243)

1.2.2.3 English for specific purposes (ESP)

Finally, the ESP definition of genre draws upon insights from both new rhetoric and systemic functional Linguistics approaches; thus, emphasizing both formal properties of texts and the communicative purposes of them. Swales (1990) indicates that a genre is a class of communicative events sharing a set of communicative purposes which create a rationale of a genre. This rationale establishes constraints on contributions that are allowed in terms of content, positioning and form. He also believes that exemplars or instances of a genre are similar in terms of structure, style, content and intended audience, and if these expectations are realized, the exemplars will be recognized by the members of discourse communities. Taken together, it seems that among all